GO BIG WITH BARRONETT BLINDS™

Once you hunt from a big hub blind from Barronett Blinds™ you'll never want to hunt from small, cramped blinds again.

Forget the small, claustrophobia-inducing blinds of yesterday. In a BIG blind from Barronett Blinds™, you'll have more room to move and more room to shoot—even while standing. The blinds are roomy and durable, but they are not heavy. Even our biggest blinds set-up and come down in seconds with no loose poles.

Barronett Blinds™ doesn't sacrifice quality for added size. Barronett Blinds™ utilize high-quality, lightweight, polyester fabric that is ideal for a big blind. The fabric is thin, but boasts a high thread count with a tighter weave, resulting in a durable fabric with a low sheen. The hub blind design also keeps the fabric tight, so it won't flap in the wind. Barronett Blind™ poles are continually tested, and the high carbon steel pole ends and die-cast aluminum central hub make them even more durable. While other manufacturers have switched to weaker and smaller-diameter poles to save costs, Barronett Blinds™ have maintained their proven design.

Not every hunting situation calls for the same size blind, so we've created a variety of models from which you can choose. It might be the new Beast™, which can comfortably accommodate a party of four hunters; maybe it's the Big Mike™ XT, the tallest hub blind on the market; there's also the world's first flared-base hub blind, the Bell Bottom™; or try the Wind Storm™, perfect for running and gunning while turkey or predator hunting. Whatever the situation, we have a blind to fit your needs. To accompany the variety of blind sizes, Barronett Blinds™ are offered in a variety of camo patterns. The original BLOODTRAIL™ is our most popular woodland pattern; new this year is BLOODTRAIL™ Blades, a photo-realistic field camo that works great in corn fields, grain fields and grassy areas. Also new and featured on our Grounder™ 250 is BLOODTRAIL™ Snow camo.

Whatever the terrain, whatever the hunt...go BIG with Barronett Blinds™ and experience the room and durability of a Barronett Blind™.

Hunting with primitive self-gear means you must be close, especially when shooting stone points. Today I had three bears within 10 yards of my blind. I took a world-class bear with a flint-tipped arrow at seven steps. I needed the room to shoot my longbow and the Barronett was the answer.

Bell Bottom™

WORLD'S FIRST FLARED-BASE HUB BLIND

Like other hub blinds, the Bell Bottom™ is extremely portable, easy to set up, easy to take down, and has no loose parts; but, the flared base offers many advantages, especially for archers. Flaring the bottom creates more interior room and larger vertical window openings without adding extra weight. The extra-wide interior allows hunters to avoid spooking game by staying farther away from open windows, and also provides more room to draw a bow or lift a cross bow into shooting position. In addition, the flared-base design creates larger vertical window openings that are much easier for archers to shoot from while seated.

"Those wire-hoop blinds never held up very well in the wind, not like those hub blinds from Barronett," continued Buddy Comstock. "To tell you the truth, I'm glad they were blown away. I should have never bought those wire-hoop blinds in the first place. If they can't stand tall

"These Barronett Blinds are much more sturdy than my old wire-hoop blinds, and a lot easier to put away," said hunter Cameron Sumner. "I was so sick of wrestling those big wire hoops, but now I don't have to thanks to this Barronett Wind Storm that blew in."

One technique that works well for hunting antelope is to set up a portable blind. With no cover in sight for miles and the sun beating down, my Barronett Blind made the all-day hunts comfortable; and on day two, I was able to take this great buck.
